

Biographical Information

James Edgar Matthews III

Director, Technical Standards & Standards Policy

Distinguished Associate

Corning Incorporated

Ambassador, International Electrotechnical Commission (IEC)

Jim Matthews is director of worldwide standards engineering activities for Corning's Global Technology and Industry Standards group. He is responsible for Corning's external standardization activities across Corning, including flat panel displays, mobile devices, optical fiber, cable, optical components and applications, as well as coordination across several additional business areas. He has been a Corning employee for over 37 years. He was recognized by Corning with a once-in-a-lifetime Division People Development Award.

External Standardization Roles:

International Electrotechnical Commission (IEC)

IEC Ambassador (Systems and Information / Communications Technology)

Chair, IEC Directives Maintenance Team

IEC Vice-President and Chair: Standardization Management Board (2011-2016)

President, United States National Committee of the IEC (2005-2010)

Member, IEC Council Board (2005 – 2010)

Institute of Electrical And Electronic Engineers (IEEE)

Member, IEEE Standards Association Board Of Governors

International Telecommunications Union (ITU-T)

Rapporteur, ITU-T Study Group 15 Optical Transport (1995-2006)

American National Standards Institute

ANSI Board of Directors

ANSI Board Executive Committee

ANSI Company Member Forum, Chair

Education

Georgia Institute of Technology, Bachelor of Electrical Engineering

Georgia Institute of Technology, Master's of Science In Electrical Engineering

Awards

ANSI Elihu Thomson Electrotechnology Medal, (2015)

Corning Incorporated Distinguished Associate (2013)

Society For Standards Professionals (SES) Leo B. Moore award (2012)

ANSI Astin-Polk International Standards Medal (2011)

June 2018