As one of the world’s leading producers of International Standards, the International Organization for Standardization (ISO) is a key player in the development of global markets for a very broad spectrum of subjects.

Each year, a host country organizes a multi-day forum that brings together more than 600 delegates and accompanying persons from ISO’s more than 160 member countries. The purpose of the event, known as the ISO General Assembly, is to provide a central arena for the discussions that will shape the direction of ISO’s future products, services, and systems.

On September 17 – 22, 2012, the United States, via the American National Standards Institute (ANSI), will play host to the world’s standardization community as ANSI welcomes ISO to San Diego, California.

Since ISO’s founding in 1947, ANSI has helped to propel ISO’s work by representing U.S. interests at the table where ISO standards and policies are developed. ANSI serves as the focal point for U.S. parties interested in ISO standards development, and as the nation’s representative to the ISO for all U.S. technical and policy contributions.

Sponsorship Opportunities

To ensure our joint project event on behalf of all ISO volunteers from the U.S. and elsewhere, we ask our partner organizations to kindly consider sponsoring ANSI’s hosting of the ISO General Assembly 2012 in San Diego. Please feel free to call us to discuss any of the various proposed sponsorship levels and the many valuable benefits possible to organizations sponsoring at each level. Sponsors may commit to specific financial contributions, in-kind contributions of needed equipment and supplies (such as IT equipment, software, photocopiers, office supplies, delegate welcome kits, etc.), or sponsorship of specific events (such as coffee breaks, lunches, the welcoming reception, or the gala dinner).

Aligning with ANSI and U.S. technology and innovation communities around the globe

To showcase U.S. technology and innovation to colleagues around the globe

To promote a set of standards development and conformity assessment processes that closely align with market and lead to greater market access

To help executives in industry and government understand the importance of both ANSI’s hosting of the ISO General Assembly 2012 in San Diego. Please find at right information on the various proposed sponsorship levels and the many valuable benefits possible to organizations sponsoring at each level. Sponsors may commit to specific financial contributions, in-kind contributions of needed equipment and supplies (such as IT equipment, software, photocopiers, office supplies, delegate welcome kits, etc.), or sponsorship of specific events (such as coffee breaks, lunches, the welcoming reception, or the gala dinner).

Leadership

To demonstrate to world markets that U.S. and ISO standardization activities are globally relevant International Standards and their related compliance activities

To demonstrate the U.S. commitment to leadership in various industries and in ISO and management meetings, as appropriate.

All contributions will support ISO’s critical mission to develop and make available the world’s most useful, relevant, and appropriate standards and to ensure their international acceptance and implementation.
