RE: HITSP Specifications – Now available in HTML

HITSP is pleased to offer a new feature on the hitsp.org site, which is the addition of a HTML library of the HITSP specifications. This library consists of HTML renditions of the most current version of the HITSP documents. The library is also available as a downloadable set of files that can be run locally. More information is available on the site.

The library can be accessed through the "HITSP Specifications, Available in HTML here" link on the right side of the www.hitsp.org main page.

HITSP is committed to continuously providing improvements to our information products to better serve our audience, and comments and observations on this and other HITSP information products are encouraged. Please use the Contact Us link at the top of every page for further information or to provide feedback.
