Now in its sixth year, the annual Electrostatic Protection and Standardization Conference provides a unique platform for U.S. and Chinese experts from industry, academia and the government to discuss related developments. The Conference also promotes the alignment of ESD standards and conformance for use within Chinese factories and critical manufacturing processes, which ultimately support the U.S. electronics industry. This year’s Conference will address topics such as ESD technology, standardization for product quality improvement, and integrating ESD protection, among others.

To learn more about the U.S.-China SCCP or sponsor or participate in a workshop, please visit our website.