

The American National Standards Institute (ANSI) China Program

The ANSI China Program helps to build stronger relationships between the U.S. and China in the areas of standards and conformance. As the coordinator of the U.S. standardization system, ANSI serves as a bridge in facilitating smoother communication, collaboration, and the creation of win-win solutions between business and government stakeholders in the U.S. and China. ANSI's rich experience can help you open doors and expand your footprint in the Chinese market.

Through cooperative relationships with business, industry, and government leaders on both sides; collaborative workshops with technical and policy experts; and individual, need-based outreach on your organization's behalf, ANSI is the problem-solver you can rely on to create win-win solutions for American and Chinese technological and business development.
