Benefits of Participation

Energy efficiency holds far-reaching benefits for the nation. In addition to being a key component to America’s clean energy future, energy efficiency holds economic, social, and environmental benefits. Participation in the EESCC provides the ability to:

- Help determine priorities on standardization issues impacting energy efficiency and the innovation and deployment of emerging services and technologies
- Actively contribute to a public-private partnership focused on advancing the nation’s clean energy goals
- Demonstrate your company, organization, or agency’s commitment to U.S. energy independence, competitiveness, and economic growth

Return EESCC participation forms to jzabinski@ansi.org, eesc@ansi.org, or via fax: 212.398.0023

- Help promote adoption and effective deployment of energy efficiency solutions
- Access early information on standardization issues that impact quality, lead-time, and idea-to-market cycle of emerging technologies, services, and products
- Influence recommendations to policymakers on the use of voluntary consensus standards to address energy efficiency needs
- Inform strategic policy discussions within standards and conformance bodies at the national, regional, and international levels
- Leverage cross-industry and global networking opportunities and enhance relationships with key business organizations, industry associations, and professional societies
- Access emerging information on key initiatives and developments in the energy efficiency space
